STEAMERS IN COLLISION.

Sad Termination to a Large Excursion Party off the Coast of Maryland.

Many Lives Believed to be Lost, but the Number not Known, Owing to the Confusion.

BALTIMORE, July 28.—The excursion steamer Louise and the Bay Line steamer Virginia were in collision tonight near Fort Carroll. Four people are known to have been killed and about 75 injured. Many believe that a large number were drowned. Just how many lives were lost cannot be positively determined. There are seven missing. They may have jumped or been thrown overboard. Twelve persons have been taken to the hospitals in a badly injured condition. Just how many people went over into the water is not known, but some eye-witnesses say that a great number of the people—men, women and children—who were sitting on the starboard side when the crash occurred, immediately disappeared. Not since the Tivoli disaster has such a thing happened near this city. All sorts of rumors are afloat as to the number of killed and injured. The streets are thronged with anxious relatives and friends. Who is to blame for the accident is not known. Naturally the pilots of both boats deny negligence. The captain of the Louise disclaims all responsibility for the accident and intimates that the blame is entirely with the Bay line steamer. The Louise was carrying 1,450 passengers, and the scene on board was an awful one. It will not be possible to learn until to-morrow of the number of missing and probably drowned. Four are known to be dead and eight missing.

CAPITAL NOTES.

The Governor-General Cancels a Most Undeserved Sentence Passed Upon a Nine-Year Old Boy.

An Important Order to Collectors of Customs Respecting Goods for Home Consumption.

(From Our Own Correspondent).

OTTAWA, Ont., July 28.—The Governor-General has peremptorily cancelled the sentence of five years' confinement in the reformatory, passed on a nine-year-old boy at London on the sole charge of vagrancy.

The Collectors of Customs have been notified that all packages in which goods commonly placed for home consumption, whether containing free goods or not, are dutiable at their actual value.

Two employees in Bates' wholesale grocery were frightfully burned today by an explosion of high wines.

The department of agriculture emphatically contradicts the sensational New York despatch that immoral girls are systematically being shipped to Canada.

THE SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

List of the New Appointments, Changes and Promotions in the Teaching Staff.

The School Trustees met last evening for the regular transaction of business, there being a full board present. Several matters of detail, including a number of accounts, were treated and disposed of; the accounts were referred to the finance committee for payment, if found correct.

The attendance during the month showed a total daily attendanae of 1,357, with an average of 1,152, an average of 44 per teacher.

A suggestion was thrown out by Mr. Erskine for a change of rooms according to the size of the division, giving a large room to a large class, and a small room to a small class. Such a change would necessitate a redistribution of desks. The chairman suggested that a special committee be appointed to inquire into the matter, and the idea was carried out, Messrs. Erskine, Hall and Mallette being appointed.

The same had referred to them another duty which is to ascertain why it is that that there are some children's names appearing on the examination returns with 60 per cent. and more, and yet not marked "passed." It was pointed out that this cannot but be discouraging to the children.

The Board at this juncture resolved itself into a committee of the whole to make the appointments of teachers. After a couple of hours' deliberation the following teachers were selected as the full teaching staff of the Victoria schools, those names marked with an asterisk being new appointments, changes and promotions:

LADEN WITH SEALSKINS.

The Steam Schooner Mischief Returns With the Coast Catch, Totalling 15,421 Skins.

Sealing circles, so long dull and depressed are so no longer. On Sunday evening the eagerly-looked-for steam schooner Mischief re-entered the harbor with a cargo of sealskins sufficient to compensate every one in Victoria interested, for the bad luck of the spring, and leave a good margin of profit. The Mischief had no news of seizures, or rumors thereof, and in this case at least no news was good news.

As was announced at the time of her departure, the Mischief cleared for Behring's Sea and the North Pacific ocean on June 14th, for the purpose of bringing back the coast catch of the Victoria sealing fleet, and enabling the schooners to go direct into Behring's Sea without returning to port. Capt. Cox and Mr. William Munsie, both heavily interested sealing men, accompanied the Mischief, which arrived in North East harbor, Shumigan Islands on July 4th. Here a majority of the Victoria schooners, nineteen in all, were found, with all colors flying in celebration of the American holiday. Their catches, were quickly transferred to the little steamer, which returned to Victoria, and the schooners at once put into the disputed sealing grounds.

Having had fine weather, and very general good luck, the catch of the fleet this season has been better than ever, the following being the list of skins delivered yesterday to the owners of the schooners in this city:—

Sapphire	1378	Penelope	578
Triumph	1088	C. H. Tupper	571
Favorite	981	Teresa	569
Ocean Belle	943	W. L. Rich	562
E. B. Marvin	878	Viva	436
Sea Lion	817	W. P. Shayward	358
Minnie	754	Ariel	349
Beatrice	710	Juanita	311
Annie C. Moore	703	Mary Taylor	302

The season has been particularly fortunate, the catch being well up in numbers and quality of skins, and no accidents of importance being recorded. The E. B. Marvin and the Pathfinder had been ashore, but only for a short time and without damage to either. The Kate reported losing one of her boats with two of the Indian hunters. They were out two days, and then despairing of finding the schooner they made Sitka in time to catch the City of Topeka, by which steamer they arrived here Saturday evening. The hunters of the Tupper, to obtain a little variety, killed a whale during their cruise; the Sapphire's hunters boasted proudly of their champion catch, and the Triumph's white hunters claimed the credit of standing at the head of the list.

The Aurora, the Mischief's people were informed, had had trouble with her Indian hunters, who absolutely refused to go into Behring's Sea, and the schooner had accordingly sailed for home with her own catch of 400, and those of the Pathfinder (800) and Kate (450). The Mary Ellen was spoken at Alitak Bay with 1,383 skins abroad. None of the fleet anticipated trouble this year, and all were confident of continued good luck.

On the 17th of June, Capt. Jacobsen, of the Minnie, suffered a serious loss by the desertion of one of his hunters, a negro, and a boat puller named Charlie. The runaways took not only the ship's boat, but two rifles, a shot gun and twenty sealskins belonging to the Minnie. On the day that the deserters left the ship, Capt Jacobsen followed them, and seeing that they were pursued both opened fire. Twenty shots were sent back towards the captain's boat, none of which took effect, although one struck less than 20 feet away. On the way down the Mischief ran across the negro, whom, of course, they had no power to deal with, at Alitak Bay, where he had entered the service of one of the other boats.

WINTER WANTED IN SUMMER.

A Quick and Clever Piece of Detective Skill—A Man Required in Tacoma for Forgery Arrested on the Batavia.

Click, click, goes the simple telegraph key, meaning nothing to the uninitiated, but in reality putting a stop to a gentleman's extensive oriental tour, and reducing the steamship Batavia's list by just one passenger, on her trip to China. Saturday last, Provincial Police Sergeant Langley received a telegram from Detective M. C. Sullivan, of Portland, asking him to arrest a man of several aliases, one of which is Winter. He was formerly a steward on one of the Sound steamers, but he is also a shorthand and typewriter. A description of the man was given, and the object for which he is wanted. Sergeant Langley telegraphed to Officer Redgrave, who is now in Vancouver, but he being absent, Sergeant Hayward took the matter in hand and found his man on board the Batavia, Sunday night, his ticket reading to Yokohama. This done, a telegram was sent to Victoria for particulars. Then the wire between Victoria and Portland was kept busy till everything was made clear and instructions received to hold the man till Mr. Sullivan arrives, which he will by this evening's Kingston. The telegram settling the matter was not received until within an hour and a half of the time put down for the steamer to sail, and the telegram from Mr. Langley to Vancouver was made to slide along the line at a good rate. Altogether it was about as quick a piece of business in the detective line as could be wished, and it will serve to illustrate how quickly the mechanism of the law can work when set in motion by energetic men.

Winter is wanted for having forged the name of J. Selwood for $2,000 on the National Bank of Tacoma.

Mr. Taylor has been retained to represent the bank if the prosecution is conducted here, but if Winter saves all concerned the trouble and expense of extradition matters will be much simplified.

Sergt. Langley went over to Vancouver this morning to bring back the man whose identity will be proved before he is sent back.

A HORRIBLE BUTCHERY.

A Regiment of Troops Mowed Down by the Insurgents at Buenos Ayres.

The Argentine War Ships in the Harbor Join the Enemy and Bombard the City.

LONDON, July 28.—A dispatch from Buenos Ayres to the Times, dated Sunday noon, says: "The fighting began at dawn Saturday, and continued till dark, when both sides had their positions. The government police and cavalry suffered terribly. During the night the city was as quiet as the dead, but behind their shutters the citizens were alert. The insurgents reopened hostilities at dawn on Sunday, with a heavy artillery, upon the government troops, under Vice-President Pellegrini. A terribly tragic blunder occurred early in the day when a regiment suddenly deciding to join the insurgents advanced for that purpose towards the artillery. Their signals were misunderstood, and they were literally mown down by a terrific fusilade within the narrow streets. The minister of war was wounded during the fighting, and the minister of finance was made prisoner. Colonel Marmendia, Major Campos and many other officers were killed. The commander of the firemen was shot by his own men. An armistice was ordered at noon and an effort was made to reach some agreement and stop the butchery.

THE CITY BOMBARDED.

A later despatch to the Times is that the armistice lasted only until one p.m., when the ships in the harbor began firing upon the government houses, Pellegrin, having refused the terms proposed by the insurgents. The British gun-boats Beagle and Bramble arrived at 3 p.m. to protect the British subjects. The navy went over to the insurgents in a body. The Patagonia bombarded the government house, and the Panama shelled President Celman's residence. The war ships ceased the bombardment at 4 p.m., and a buletin was issued announcing that the revolution had triumphed and that was formed. At 9 o'clock Monday morning Colman's troops occupied the houses around the plaza. The American, British and Spanish ministers instructed the commanders of the war vessels of those nationalities that if the Argentine warships resumed firing they would jointly protest against the action on the ground that it is contrary to the rules of war to bombard an open city without notice. The fighting began again at 3 p.m. President Celman proposed terms, which were rejected by the union. The troops hailed this decision with vivas, Buenos Ayres.

At 10 o'clock this morning the government troops received a strong reinforcement from the interior. President Celman has returned to the city and resumed his office. The situation is changing in favor of the government.

Crop Prospects in the District Never Better—Fishermen Upset in Fraser.

(From our own Correspondent.)

NEW WESTMINSTER, B. C., July 28.—The Japanese fishermen who created a riot at one of the canneries a month ago, have elected to be tried under the Speedy Trials Act. The case is fixed for Aug. 11.

A well-known citizen, who was attending the picnic at North Arm on Saturday, while slightly under the influence of liquor and disturbed by jealousy, jumped into the river, with the avowed intention of suiciding. He was quickly rescued, however, without suffering more than a wetting.

The fish averaged one hundred and sixty-five to the boat last night, the largest run yet, for this season. The prospects to-day look bright for a good run, but little faith is put in it amounting to more than a spurt.

Two drunken fishermen capsized their boat yesterday morning but managed to get hold of her again and floated six miles down the river, when they were rescued in a completely exhausted condition. They were taken to Ladner's, and brought to life on the homœopathic principle.

From all parts of the district reports say crop prospects were never better.

An Entirely New Crime.

TORONTO, July 28.—Stavely Hill, British M.P., said to a reporter: "When Mr. Blaine says that the killing of seal is "contra bonos mores," he invents an entirely new international crime. The American claim is such a shabby one that it is very difficult to state an argument in support of it. I read it over, and I say as a lawyer, it is impossible to see any argument in it. The fact is that Blaine has been urged on by the American Commercial Company to take a ground which is absolutely indefensible."

The regular match on the Victoria cricket club's card for Saturday next has been scored off in favor of one that is sure to prove more interesting. It is a match between the club and an eleven from the navy. The match at Esquimalt on Saturday was for the purpose of picking out an eleven from the fleet to meet the V. C. C. The latter intend to put the best of their men in the field, and if they succeed in getting together some of those cricketers who can play when they like, Saturday's match will be the event of the season.

THE LABOR QUESTION.

Rev. Percival Jenns' Sermon, Last Sunday Evening, on the Eight-Hour Movement.

Rev. P. McF. Macleod Also Makes the Labor Question the Subject of His Sermon.

REV. MR. JENNS' SERMON.

In compliance with the request of the Trades Assembly, Rev. Percival Jenns, on Sunday evening, made the labor question the basis of his remarks, dwelling particularly upon the eight hour movement, which received his support. His sermon, which is given in full, was listened to with close attention by the entire congregation, which would, no doubt, have been much larger had the subject of the sermon been announced in advance.

Taking for his text I. Chron., xxii., 16, and II. Chron., x., 4, the reverend gentleman said:

"On Sunday last we were with King David during the time that he was making extensive preparations in the building of the renowned temple at Jerusalem. The gold, the silver, and the brass and the iron, that he accumulated during his long reign, may fitly be taken to represent capital, and the men of Israel, together with the strangers that were among them, as labor. The first of our texts furnishes the advice that the aged monarch gave to his son Solomon when he made him king over Israel. The second text describes the effect that the close adherence to this advice had upon labor at the close of Solomon's reign. On the other hand, we must not overlook what the union of capital and labor had, in the meantime, produced. The kingdom had risen to great glory. The temple was the joy and pride of the nation. Merchant fleets had been built in the Red Sea, and in the Mediterranean, and had covered the seas, bringing home the treasures of foreign lands. Jerusalem had become a city of palaces, and wealth flowed through its streets, that silver had lost its value to such an extent that it was nothing counted of during Solomon's reign. But this very prosperity was not without danger. Men were tired of the labor by which it had been produced, and not unnaturally longed for repose and rest, so that no sooner had they laid the wise king in his tomb than they demanded of his son, that he should ease them somewhat from the grievous servitude of his father, and release them from the heavy yoke that for a period of forty years had been placed upon them. The conflict between labor and capital is as old as society itself. It dates back to that period when men first began to live together, and for mutual benefit organized a division of labor. At the dawn of reason it became clearly manifest that so long as every man endeavored to do everything for himself, without being in any way dependent upon others, no advance could be made, no battle won over the rude forces of nature. With the growth of intellect it was seen that the earth is one vast treasure-house, capable of yielding immense comfort and gratification to beings who have wisdom enough to appreciate them. But these treasures were all in an undeveloped state, and that before they could be of service to man another ingredient was necessary, that was labor. Thus the earth, plus labor, would yield harvest; wool and other fibres, plus labor, clothing; crude ore, plus labor, metal; and so on till the highest glory and refinement could be obtained. Now, the point of dispute has always been, who should supply the second portion of this compound? And, further, when the two articles were at hand, viz.: nature and labor, how should they be so blended as to produce the desired result? Metallic ores and labor would never have formed a steam engine without the original genius of the inventor, and thus we see that a third element is needed, the element of mind, or commanding intelligence. Hence when we look at any great and powerful empire where the arts and sciences have vied with each other to produce wealth, comfort and refinement, we perceive that the whole has been brought about by the union of these three forces, viz., nature, labor and mind. The next question is, in what proportion are these three ingredients found? The first is coextensive with the earth itself and the light that shines upon it. The second is limited by the strength and endurance of men and animals, together with the stores of energy that the former are capable of making nature yield. The third is a much scarcer article, as few men possess inventive genius, originality or power to lead; without which even skilled labor can accomplish little. Those in fact, who are able to tap new sources of energy, and thereby render assistance to millions are exceedingly rare. Now the question arises; in the distribution of rewards that the world yields, should all men receive alike, or should distribution be made accordingly as men are differentiated from each other by the possession of the rarer gift? Gold brings a high price on account of its scarceness. Large diamonds and rubies are of immense value because in the world there are few of them; and it seems but natural to suppose that the rarest gem of all should fetch the highest price in the market, if sold at its money value. There have, of course, been, and are now, men like Michael Faraday, who have lived and died so that the nations might be enriched by the splendour of their intellects; but we have no right to compel or expect all men to do he same. It is human nature to hold on to all that can be grasped. Nor do I think that the legislative powers of any country will be ever able to interfere with the rights of personal property so as to put all men upon one common level. When in the early church we read that on account of troubled times men "had things common," they gave up their wealth of their own free choice, that they might obtain the approval of God. Nor do I believe that there will ever be any power on earth that will cause the rich to relieve the wants of the poor, save the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Revolutions there have been, revolutions there doubtless will be in the future, but such violent convulsions will never produce equality.

My conviction is that a highly Christian and scientific education for all men will alone solve the difficulties between labor and capital. Raise the mental standard of the people. Let every youth learn that "knowledge is power," and that there are rude forces of nature about him that he may enlist and compel to do slavish work for him. That these forces work without murmur or fatigue, and that we are only now beginning to tap our inexhaustible supply of energy, and he will soon discover the means of lessening the hours of daily work. Already is steam doing as much work as the whole working population of the globe! Follow in the path where this leads, and let steam and electricity do all that is painful in labor, and men may then with justice expect a full day's pay for a half day's work. Let the time come speedily when unskilled laborers shall res among the fossils of the past; let all men be artisans and skilled workmen and the rest of the world's work be accomplished by unthinking force. Then every man may sit under his own vine and under his own fig tree and spend a large portion of each day in the improvement of his mind. In that, I mean to say, that a skilled workman is not a laborer, or throw disparagement upon mere work. Labor is a blessing, not a curse. If God had intended men to live without work, he would have made their clothes grow upon their backs, and furnished houses to spring out of the earth. God who has made the earth, sea, and air has made nothing to be idle. Employment in some shape or other would seem to be appointed to every living thing. The highest angels of heaven have their work, and the most minute of the earth's insects must be busy or perish. All nature lifts her voice against idleness. As far as the eye can penetrate into the great depths of space, all is upheld in being and order by constant agitation. It is the running water that keeps trees and the air fanned by winds that is wholesome. Christ speaks of His Father as a worker when he says, "My Father worketh hitherto," and he adds, "and I work." No man ever worked harder than Jesus, both physically and mentally. I am myself exceedingly fond of work, and I believe all healthy men are. If it brings fatigue, the rest that follows is sweet and refreshing, and the two combined conduce to join a fine, healthy, physical frame, without which even mental endowments are almost worthless.

With regard to the "eight hour question," I think when it can be accomplished without forming a stumbling block in the way of all progress, it is most desirable, and I fully sympathize with those who desire more time for mental culture, and the gaining of more knowledge of the very wonderful and beautiful world in which God has placed us. Our time here is very short, and it should not all be taken up in making bricks. Let us see rather the fair superstructure rise, whose towers shall reach to heaven.

Before, however, this happy state of things can be brought about, there are other questions that have to be solved. Working men who join unions are not the only class suffering from long hours. Merchants, storekeepers and many professional men have much longer hours than they, and are often engaged in work much less interesting and healthful. There is also a class that is much nearer related to the working men than these, —I allude to their wives. In excluding cheap forms of labor we have excluded the only possibility of these receiving any help whatever, and I am perfectly satisfied that a woman who has to attend to a family of children, as well as prepare her husband's meals, and is engaged at this work from early morning till late at night, knows more of the drudgery of life than her husband, who works at his handicraft for a period of nine hours, and is free. If complaint is raised against work, where are we to find the remedy for this? The women of some nations have sought their own remedy; but alas, it is one fatal to national prosperity, and one that in the long run must bring about the extinction of those peoples.

In conclusion, let me add that while I think the object of the present agitation a most desirable one, I believe the time chosen for it in this province is inopportune. I would rather see the object successfully accomplished first in older countries. A new country like our own stands most in need of labor, and nothing but labor can develope the vast resources and immense treasure that God has placed within our reach. To kick against this is to kill the goose that lays the golden egg. In fact, no man should dream of coming to a new country who is not prepared to do more work than would be expected from him elsewhere. I believe that in no part of the world are working men as well off as they are here. The larger portion of them are living in their own houses and cultivating their own gardens. Their children receive a most excellent education free of cost, and the highest positions in the state are thrown open to them. These, together with exquisite scenery and a lovely climate, should not be lightly thought of; indeed I have often heard it expressed that British Columbia is "the working man's paradise."

REV. MR. MACLEOD'S SERMON.

St. Andrew's Presbyterian church was crowded to its fullest capacity on Sunday evening, many of those present being members of the Victoria Trades Assembly. Rev. Mr. Macleod having read the 58 h chapter of Isaiah, selected as his text the sixth verse, viz:

"Is not this the fast that I have chosen? To unloose the bonds of wickedness, to undo the heavy burdens, and to let the oppressed go free, and that ye break every yoke?" He said: The prophet in this passage contrasts the false religion with the true. The false is anxious with regard to outward forms, and divorces religion from the daily life and conduct. The true sees no value in these forms apart from the practical outcome of them in deeds, not in empty words. The same contrast is to be drawn to-day between the religion of ritual and the religion of power. There are some who limit the sphere of the pulpit to what they call the preaching of the gospel, that is to say, to the statement of certain truths which can be listened to or slept under with an easy mind. Isaiah's gospel would not have suited these friends for it was practical, and consisted in undoing heavy burdens and letting the oppressed go free. The pulpit has to do with whatsoever things are honest, with whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely and whatsoever things are of good report.

The request made me by the Trades Assembly gave me a great deal of pleasure. First, because its appeal to the ministers of the gospel is made in the name of Jesus Christ, who they declare "to have done infinitely more than all other agencies since combined towards the amelioration of the condition of oppressed humanity." I for one could not but give a respectful and courteous acknowledgment to a request so put before me, and when the capitalists and employers of labor approach me in the same spirit I will promise them as cordial a reception. Second, I was pleased with the request of the Trades Assembly because they asked nothing from me inconsistent with my duty as a minister of the gospel, who is under bonds to his Master to know nothing among men but Jesus Christ and Him crucified; who is to be alike priest to rich and poor, high and low, and who is to encourage the things that make for peace and that tend for the edification of all. The Christian minister is an arbitrator, not a partisan; and when he is faithful to his commission will almost inevitably bring upon himself the ill-will of the heated partisans on both sides. Third, I was pleased with the request because it deals with a subject having an important bearing on the moral and spiritual welfare of the people, and which cannot be dealt with anywhere so effectually as in the Christian pulpit. Also other apart from the existing condition of things in respect to other questions between labor and capital, the number of hours which ought to be considered a fair day's work can be discussed, and discussed upon lines upon which all right-thinking men must be practically agreed.

Now, let us at the outset dispose of some objections which are raised to the reduction of the hours of labor. It is said that the number of hours which are to constitute a day's labor must be left as a matter of contract between employer and employed. I answer that objection might have weight were the contracting parties on equal terms, were the employers as dependent on the workmen as the workmen on the employer, but this is notoriously not the case, and therefore it is needful that public opinion, and if needs be the law, must come in between the contracting parties to prevent oppression. Again, I would say this objection might have weight were the contracting parties always guided by strict justice in their dealings with each other, but, alas! this is more than we can look for. And therefore it is a clear gain when by law or public opinion we lift a matter about which there may be disputes out of the way by having universal agreement regarding it. Surely the hours of a fair day's work may be thus settled once for all. No man will say that injury has been done by the change from ten hours to nine as a day's labor, and why should there not be equal unanimity in agreeing upon eight hours.

It is objected that it is practically impossible to lay down an iron-clad rule on this subject; that the length of a day's labor should be determined largely by the nature of the work. I answer that declaring the general principle of eight hours as a fair day's work will help the regulation of all special cases, and prepare the way for such adjustment as may be necessary for a universal application of the rule. Again, it is objected that more leisure will mean more drunkenness and vice—that leisure is a dangerous thing, for Satan finds some mischief still for idle hands to do. I answer, the alternative is not between work and idleness, but between work with the hands and work with the brain, work for an employer and work in the home and garden, work to earn bread and such recreation of body and mind as will make life bright and joyous, and take away the sense of weariness and irritation that springs from absorption in the common round and daily task. Further, as a matter of fact, is it the men who spend their time in the saloon who are eager for shorter hours? Certainly not. The drunkards have always so much lost time to make up that they do not wish their opportunities for making up lost time curtailed, so that in many cases when petitions have been prepared for signature to obtain the Saturday half holiday the men who have refused to sign have been those who kept blue Monday.

Again it is objected that if the eight hours movement should succeed, what is to hinder the men agitating for seven hours or six hours as a day's work. I answer that whenever the workmen put forward a claim that is unjust or unreasonable, we can rely upon the general common sense of the world to reject and denounce it, but surely it is no reason for denying a just claim that granting it may prepare the way for an unjust one. When the unreasonable demand is made it will be time enough to deal with it.

Now, what are the arguments in favor of the shortening of the hours of labor. That labor lightened means, other things being equal, health and life prolonged. Why is it that so many wage-earners, by their fiftieth year, are bent in body, stiff in joints, and haggard in countenance, and that when they get out of work at that age it is hard with all their skill and experience to find employment again. Why, but that they have kept up their daily toil for perhaps 20 or 30 years, week in and week out, without sufficient break to preserve them from the effects of their constant toil! Why is it that many toilers take to drink, but because they feel the need of a stimulant to relieve them from their sense of weariness, and, alas! like the spur to the jaded horse, it brings no new resource of strength but rather speedily robs them of the little they had. Nor is it the heaviness of the toil that tells upon the strength so much as the monotony of it, so that the opportunity of an hour or two in cultivating the garden, in boating or fishing would be invaluable in invigorating the body and making the daily labor light and happy. The employer who is wise takes his summer holiday and has a thousand ways of diverting his mind from the cares of business; and surely the

PORT CRESCENT.

A FEW UNDENIABLE FACTS:

President T. F. Oakes says the Victoria, Port Crescent and Chehalis Railway will be completed by the 31st December, 1891. This will make Port Crescent the terminus of the strongest corporation on the American Continent. Work on the breakwater will commence immediately and will be completed during next year; the Harbor will then accommodate 120 ships, allowing one cable (see Minard on Harbors) to each large merchant vessel in which to swing, not including twice that number which might be tied up to wharves. Port Crescent will then be possessed of one of the best harbors on the coast.

The soundings on the Company's Map are guaranteed to be correct.

More than 3,000,000 acres of the richest land in the State of Washington, lying to the West and Southwest, are directly tributary to Port Crescent.

It is confidently predicted that in ten years the population of Port Crescent will rival that of Tacoma and Seattle combined.

We strongly recommend to our friends and the public generally the advisability of securing a few lots at present prices. Lots, that to-day can be bought for hundreds, will be worth in a few months as many thousands. We have a limited number of choice lots at present on sale.

SAVED FROM ELECTROCUTION.

How the Canadian Murderer Chapleau Received the News of His Deliverance.

A special correspondent telegraphs as follows from Dannemora to yesterday's New York Herald: The happiest woman in the state of New York is Mrs. Joseph H, Chapleau, of Cobblestone farm, three miles from Plattsburg. For months past she has been striving as only a woman can strive to save her husband from a murderer's death. Her efforts have been crowned with success.

Yesterday was a trying day for Chapleau. He had been much disturbed by the sound of hammering in the quiet precincts of the deserted wing of the prison where he was kept in solitary confinement, and he shrewdly surmised that the sounds which he heard had to do with his ending. He was right. Warden Isaiah Fuller, aided by Warden Durston, of Auburn, who arrived about noon, was engaged in completing the connections between dynamo No. 853 in the machine shop and the chair.

There was ghastly significance in the sound, and the iron nerve which this French-Canadian had so far displayed began to shake a little in spite of himself. Meanwhile the telephone told Warden Fuller that Plattsburg was rejoicing over the news of a reprieve. The warden could not believe it, as he had got no news from Albany, but soon after eight o'clock the news came in authoritative shape, and the kind-hearted warden at once hastened to tell the prisoner. Chapleau's face blanched when Mr. Fuller entered the room, but he said never a word.

"Well, Chapleau, I have good news for you. Governor Hill has commuted your sentence to imprisonment for life."

"Is that so?" said the murderer, running his fingers through his hair and indulging in the queer smile for which he is noted. "I am very glad to hear it. I was afraid when I heard the noises to-day that you were getting ready to do it."

Then, without further ado, he turned to his paper and began reading as if nothing of particular moment to him had happened.

This morning Chapleau was shaved and barbered and donned the prison suit. He was turned over to prison fare. The newspapers, in which he has taken such delight, were cut off from him, and, saving that he was not put to work at once, but placed in a cell in the old prison, he was treated just like all other prisoners.

He was pacing the prison yard, just outside of the old prison walls, when I, the first newspaper man to see him since his sentence, was permitted, in company with Warden Fuller, to have a chat with him. He was greatly changed by the loss of his beard.

"Well, Chapleau," said the warden, "how do you feel to-day?"

"Pretty well, sir," said the convict. "It is a big load off my mind, I tell you, but it is only right. Those Browns injured themselves. I never tried to kill the man."

"You were a little nervous yesterday," said the warden.

"Yes, I was, sir. I was fearful yesterday when I heard you at work. I had about given up hope, but I couldn't quite do so. I said to myself, I will wait till two o'clock Saturday afternoon and then if nothing comes I will give up hope. I clung to hope, though I knew the sentence was wrong. I did not have a chance at the trial. My counsel was no good."

"But why didn't you hire a good counsel?" asked the warden. "You had plenty of money."

"Well," said the murderer, "everybody said I had a sure thing for murder in the second degree. That I could not possibly get more than second degree, and —and—"

"And you were too mean to hire a counsel; is that it?" said the warden, sharply.

"Well, sir, I guess it is something like that," said the prisoner, with a shamefaced air.

I asked Chapleau if he was in liquor when he struck the fatal blows. He said he was not. He had given up drinking some time before, but he had struck one blow, he said, and then he did not know what had got into him.

"Well, are you ready to go to work in the morning?" asked the warden by way of a final.

"I am indeed, sir," said the murderer.

A few days ago Warden Fuller received a tip to the effect that the Westinghouse company were preparing to sue out a writ of replevin for the purpose of getting possession of their dynamo. The Westinghouse people are bound to leave no stone unturned which will save their instrument from the unpleasant notoriety of officially killing men. Warden Fuller was not going to let any replevin suit stand in the way of his duty. As no injunction under such a suit could be served without giving him twenty-four hours' notice he determined, in case such a notice came, to close the prison doors and not open them again until sentence had been executed.

I rode over to the Cobblestone farm this afternoon to see how Mrs. Chapleau took the news. She is a large, masculine sort of woman, well fitted by nature to carry on the fight for existence which has fallen to her lot. I found her at work in the field with her daughter and her adopted son. She had not much to say except that she was very glad. "I have worked hard to save him," she said, "and it was only justice. It would have been wrong to kill him on such false swearing as those Browns gave. I don't think Joe meant to kill him, anyway."

The people of Plattsburg say that Chapleau left things in much better shape financially than he had generally been credited with doing. Not only did he own the little farm, but he had quite a sum of money laid by. He was a man of excellent thrift.

A few days ago the dynamo was tried on a lusty young two-year-old bull. The hair was cut close on the bull's forehead, and a dampened pad was fastened there. The wet sponge at the other pole of the battery was fastened to the right hind leg. When the lever was turned the bull dropped as if his legs had suddenly melted beneath him. Not a tremor, not a sigh, not a heartbeat, not a quiver of a muscle in the eye. The bull was dead before he knew it.

Women Always Return Umbrellas.

"Did you ever know a woman to fail to return a borrowed umbrella?" asked a dealer in these articles, addressing a reporter.

"I can't say I ever did."

"Nobody else ever did," said the dealer, emphatically, "I have been a long time in the business of selling them, and I have made a special study of women in connection with the borrowed umbrella phase of social ethics, and I have yet to learn of a case in which she has abused the confidence reposed in her when she was lent an umbrella to protect herself in a sudden shower. She either returns it in person or sends it with verbal or a pretty note of thanks at the first opportunity. When a man comes in here to buy an umbrella and I get chatting with him, I ask the question.

"Did you ever lend a woman an umbrella?"

"Yes."

"Did she ever return it?"

"Yes."

"Then I go to a book I keep for this purpose and I make an entry in this form: 'Interrogated another to-day (entering the date). Answer: Lent and returned promptly. Here is the book."

And the dealer showed to the reporter a book with many pages of entries in the form given, covering a number of years.

"No, sir," repeated the dealer, with strong emphasis, as the reporter took his leave, "a woman never fails to return an umbrella."

A Fad for Pronunciation.

Don't, I beg of you, allow your vowels to flatten or shorten. You know how we learned to write the English hand, don't you? Well, there are "social assistants" at the women's exchanges who take pupils and teach them to talk as broad English as the Duchess of Marlborough. The key-note is "far." Remember. Now, give "a" in the words cat, can, t, basket, glass, hand, have land, stand, man, the sound of the vowel in "far," and you have the London accent. Make rhetorical sandwiches of "Oh deahr, no," and "Don't you know." and if you are clever, and affect severe styles, you can make the world believe you are "just over."

Characteristic Enterprise.

Ingalls is intensly interesting influential and intellectual, and as one of the most prominent statesmen in public life to-day his views on economic matters are imbued with an importance which ought to commend them to the thoughtful consideration of patrotic readers, with characteristic enterprise the New York World secured an interview with the Senator covering a broad range of questions of current moment, and it is certainly worth while to succinctly summarize his statements and make a few running comments.—Troy Press.

MR. HERING'S REPORT.

Mr. Rudolph Hering's report appears to have been carefully drawn up. We do not presume to be a judge of its merits. His opinion is the opinion of an expert and only an expert can intelligently pronounce upon it. The choice of a system of sewers and the value of any plan that may be submitted to the Corporation must, we have always contended, be made and estimated by a professional man of tried skill and acknowledged abili y. Mr. Hering, we understand, is an engineer of high standing in his profession. Having after due care selected him as their adviser the Corporation must be guided by his advice. They have no choice except to consult another engineer of still higher reputation.

There will not, we think, be any necessity for doing that. Mr. Hering has examined the ground. He has obtained information from those most competent to impart it, and he has, no doubt, carefully considered and compared the plans submitted to him for selection. The City Council have reason to conclude that he has chosen the best. He has also estimated the cost of the sewers. The sum required is a large one, but not larger than we anticipated. The citizens of Victoria need not complain if the drainage of their city does not cost them, when completed, more than half a million of dollars. Mr. Hering's estimate is considerably within that sum. He has, we think, allowed quite enough both for labor and for material.

It will be for the Corporation now to consider how to raise the money and the manner in which it is to be administered. A very great deal depends upon how the project is presented to the citizens. It will be for the Corporation to decide whether all the money shall be raised at once, or whether only so much as will be required to build the main sewers be first borrowed. There is a suggestion in the report which will, we presume, be carefully considered by the Corporation and the ratepayers. It is this: "It will not, of course, be necessary at the present time to build the entire system as laid down upon the plan. Many of the localities might wait where there are now no buildings to be accommodated." The chances of getting the work commenced soon might be increased if the ratepayers were at first asked to vote for only part of the $450,000 required.

The management of so large and so expensive work should, we think, be placed in the hands of Commissioners appointed either by the Corporation or directly by the ratepayers. Permanent commissioners appointed specially to superintend the work would be much more likely to give it the attention it required than a Committee of the City Council which would be certain to be changed to a greater or less extent every year. Great care, too, should be taken in the selection of the engineer. He should be a man of skill and of the strictest integrity. He should be a man too, who would do his duty without fear, favor or affection—with a single eye to the interests of the city.

Provision should be made that the money borrowed for the construction of the sewers could not be diverted to any other purpose on any pretext whatever. Before the citizens can be prevailed upon to authorize the Corporation to borrow so very large a sum of money, they must be satisfied that every cent of it will be expended on the sewers.

If the City Council act judiciously, and if the by-law which they submit to the ratepayers is carefully drawn up so that the work will be well done and the money carefully expended for the purpose for which it was borrowed, we believe that it will pass by a large majority. We are quite satisfied that the citizens generally see the necessity of having the city well drained. They are convinced that the public health already suffers for want of better drainage, and they know that this is an evil which is every year increasing. Even those who are reluctant to incur the expense are convinced that the city must be drained sooner or later, and that there is nothing to be gained from a pecuniary point of view by longer delay.

AN EXODUS.

The United States census is bringing some facts to view which will cause our Canadian Jeremiahs to doubt their own infallibility. These doleful prophets are all the time declaring that Canada is going to wreck and ruin. They will not admit that any part of it is prospering and when places that have grown larger and richer of late years are pointed out to them they only shake their heads and declare that these localities have prospered at the expense of other parts of the country—they may have grown larger and richer but it is only by making other places poorer and less populous.

The United States is the Happy Land of these croaking Canadians. If say they we were only in the United States and had the market of sixty-five millions open to us we would be infinitely better off in every respect. When they are told that there is poverty in the States and that thousands who have the market of sixty-five millions open to them find it exceedingly hard to make a decent living they smile incredulously and reply that if these thousands are poor it is their own fault. The exodus from Canada is a text for many a doleful sermon. The bone and sinew we are told, are leaving the country and if implicit faith were given to this gloomy prediction it might be feared that Canada will soon be again a howling wilderness.

But the Census that is now being taken in the United States tells us that a precisely similar exodus is going on in those parts of the United States which in their situation and circumstances are most like Canada. A continuous stream of emigrants has for years been flowing from the rural districts of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts and New York. Abandoned farms are seen in all these states and the exodus has been so great in some counties that it has been found necessary to have them repeopled by foreigners. No part of this Dominion of Canada has been reduced to such a strait as this. The state of New York is generally regarded as flourishing but the following return from eight of its counties does not show that its inhabitants have found it exactly a paradise.

Rensselaer	115,328	124,164
Saratoga	55 156	57,506
Schenectady	23,538	27,596
Montgomery	38,315	45.517
Fulton	30,985	37,312
Washington	45,488	43,313
Warren	25,179	27,185
Columbia	40,298	36,907
Totals	374,287	399,500

The increase in these eight counties of New York State in ten years has been only 25,213, or about 7 per cent. This is far less than the gain from natural increase, to say nothing of immigration. If the immigrants that settled in these counties within the last ten years were not counted, it is more than likely that they would show a very considerable decrease.

In the returns from twenty-seven districts in the State of Maine there have been a decrease in twenty-three and an increase in only four.

While population in the Eastern States has been stationary, or nearly so, the population of the whole union has very considerably increased during the last ten years. But it must be remembered that the same influences which have done so much to depopulate the New England States and the rural parts of New York State have been at work to drain Eastern Canada of its population. Yet no part of it has suffered so much as Maine and Vermont. When the census of Canada is taken it will, we venture to say, be found that a healthy increase has taken place in all the provinces of the Dominion.

THE ADVOCATES OF PEACE.

The members of the Peace Congress are regarded by many as a number of amiable enthusiasts whose objects, as long as human nature is what it is, can never be attained. Henry Ward Beecher was in his old age obliged to confess that the prediction which he uttered in the days of his youth, that the era of universal peace had commenced and that the time was near when men would beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks, was the hasty utterance of an enthusiastic dreamer who knew but little of men and their methods. Yet, after all, there are men of intellect, men who know much of the world and its ways, who believe that a time will come, and that not very far off, when "nation shall not lift the sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." These men believe that the world has travelled already a long way in that direction and that, notwithstanding appearances, men generally are less disposed to go to war now than they were half-a-century ago. It will hardly be said that such men as Sir Lyon Playfair, David Dudley Field, Mr. Shaw Lefevre, Mr. Chauncey Depew, Dr. Barth, of the German Reichstag, Mr. Camille Doucet, of the Academie Francaise, are mere visionaries, who are ready to exercise their abilities and spend their time in striving to attain the unattainable. Yet these men, and a great many more whose names are known to the men of their respective countries as able men and practical reformers, attended a Peace Congress which was held in London a few days ago. These eminent philanthropists believe that it is by no means hopeless to attempt to prevail upon nations to settle their disputes by arbitration. Sir Lyon Playfair said in his speech that—

"As regards war, history might be divided into three stages: First, when man and beast are in the savage state and wage war continually with one another; secondly, when nations wage war only for conquest, and thirdly, the stage of to-day, when an offensive war is odious, but a defensive war justifiable. We have reached that point in civilization when individuals must settle their disputes not by personal encounter, as was once the case, but according to law. Why should not nations bring their grievances before a properly constituted tribunal? In this great movement the United States has taken the initiative. Why should not England hold out her hand to President Harrison in the cause of arbitration? Would any one imagine England and the United States going to war? What are their actual disputes about? Cod, haddock and seal to be sure."

The reason why national disputes are not referred to arbitration is that there is a great deal of the savage yet left in civilized men. Force is naturally looked to as the last resort by ninety-nine men out of a hundred. When a dispute cannot be settled by mutual concession and agreement the natural alternative is to fight it out,

"Because the good old rule
Sufficeth them, the simple plan,
That they should take who have the power
And they should keep who can."

Perhaps the time may come, as Sir Lyon Playfair hopes, when nations will be guided by the same rules in the settlement of their disputes as individuals in civilized communities are, but the appearance of the civilized world at this present moment does not lead the observers to conclude that such a consummation is near. Never were the nations of Europe, when not actually engaged in war, more distrustful of each other. The very nation which, through its Emperor, declares that its mission is to preserve the peace, is armed to the teeth, and neighboring nations, for fear of this armed peacemaker, are straining their resources to establish and maintain enormous armaments.

One would suppose that if peace were really the object of any of these great powers, the strongest of them would propose a general disarmament, and use its influence to get its proposal accepted.

The only parts of the world in which countries seem sincere in their desire to maintain peaceful relations with their neighbors and with distant nations are the United States and Canada. On this continent the sounds of war preparations are not heard. There is no standing army worth talking about and great cities are defenceless and yet safe. But this happy state of things is deplored by not a few; many consider it foolish to depend so much on the friendliness and the forbearance of their neighbors. Yet who knows that we on this continent are not anticipating the happy condition in which the nations of the Old World will soon find it expedient to place themselves?

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

The Daily News-Advertiser has been getting in some more of its fine work. In the art of lying it has become an expert, and it never loses an opportunity of showing its skill. In its Sunday's issue it says:

"The more disagreeable of the two circumstances to which we refer was the malicious insinuation of The Colonist that threats of personal violence by the evicted miners at Wellington, on any person who ventured to return to work, had intimidated many men and would probably necessitate the sending there of military force."

The editor of the News-Advertiser will look in vain in the columns of The Colonist for what it alludes to as a "charge as false as it was malicious." We uttered no insinuation, we made no charge. Of course the News-Advertiser's editor knows this as well as we do, but when it suits his purpose to belie a contemporary he does not permit a trifle to deter him.

Portland's Population.

The result of the census for Portland, Ogn., was made known on Saturday, the population of the city being given as 35,861; East Portland, 9,788; Albina, 4,600, and the balance of Multnomah county 10,750.

Home, Sweet Home.

These are said to be almost the best words in the English language, but what is a home without tasty furniture and nice carpets, etc. Now, we wish to give you a pointer. You can get just such necessities of home comfort to better advantage at James Hastie & Co.'s, No. 62 Government street, than any other house in the city.

Street Goodiums.

Ladies and gentlemen passing along upper Pandora Avenue last Sunday evening on their way home from church, were shocked by a group of boys, old enough to know better, using the most foul and disgusting language they could give tongue to. Most of the boys are known, and if ever the offence is repeated the police will be requested to put a stop to it by summoning the offenders before the police magistrate.

Sad Accident.

A lady asked her husband yesterday if he would call in at McLennan & McFeely's and have a refrigerator sent up as everything was getting tainted with the heat. He did so. Returning home he was examining it, and leaned his arm carelessly upon it, not knowing it was loaded. His arm was instantly frozen. He was taken to the hospital and is doing well. His wife feels his absence, but thinks the refrigerator more than makes up for it.

A Sad Affair.

A Winnipeg despatch states that Mrs. Langford, the widow of the late Rev. Enos Langford, of that city, was fatally burned at her residence last Friday evening. Since the death of her husband Mrs. Langford has been very despondent, and Friday took a can of coal oil to an outhouse, pouring it over her clothing, and then applying a match. The poor woman was terribly burned and succumbed to her self-inflicted injuries at 11 o'clock Friday night.

A Sunday Spree.

Thomas Williams engaged in a conversation with a Chinaman on the Indian reserve on Sunday. The conversation was a personal one, but its nature was such as to call for the interference of Constable Lewis. Williams objected to this, and, being under the influence of liquor, he offered to manipulate the constable's face. He was frustrated in this by Lewis' strong arm, and was thrown on the ground. In the operation a bottle of whisky was noticed protruding from his pocket. It was taken into custody and conveyed to the provincial police station, Williams reluctantly accompanying it. On appearing before Mr. Robert Ward, J.P., yesterday, Williams had to pay $50 and $3 for his Sunday diversion.

Church Parade.

Pursuant to orders, issued Saturday, the men of the three headquarter batteries B. C. B. G. A.,—or at least a portion of those batteries—mustered at the drill shed Sunday morning for the annual church parade. There were not more than fifty rank and file in line, when, headed by the battery band, the line of march was taken up along Government, Yates and Douglas streets to St. John's church, where Rev. Percival Jenns preached a most appropriate and useful sermon from Psalms cxliv, 1, "The Christian Soldier." It is the general opinion that if the churches were taken in order for the annual sermons more interest would be taken and a larger attendance obtained at the annual parades.

Visitors from the East.

Mr. Henry Lyman, head of the well known drug house of Lyman, Sons & Co., Montreal, arrived in Victoria a few evenings since, and left for the East last night. He is accompanied by three of his sons, Messrs. R. C., H. H. and W. Lyman. The party have been making an extended trip through Manitoba and the Northwest, and express themselves as immensely well pleased with their trip, which throughout has been very interesting and thoroughly enjoyable. Mr. Lyman was for many years an alderman of Montreal, was prominent in its municipal committees, and while he presided over the fire department that service, as well as that of water, was greatly enlarged and improved. He was a leading member of the Board of Trade, and has been accustomed to discuss public concerns at meetings and through the press, being a controversialist and debater of very considerable ability and force. As a merchant and citizen Mr. Lyman is widely respected, while the house over which he presides is regarded as the leading establishment in its own particular line.

Harper vs. Harper.

This, before Justices McCreight, Walkem and Drake yesterday, was an appeal from a judgment of the Chief Justice, pronounced on the 21st May of the present year. The case arises out of a legacy of $10,000 bequeathed by Jerome Harper, deceased, to Ezekiel Harper, his brother. Prior to 1874, Jerome and Thaddeus Harper were engaged in business in British Columbia as partners, acquiring property over the value of $300,090. Jerome Harper died on the 27th November, 1874, bequeathing $10,000 to Ezekiel Harper and making Thaddeus Harper his sole executor. Thaddeus paid $5,000 on account of the legacy and failed to pay the balance. Subsequently he became involved in financial difficulties, which eventuated in a number of creditors obtaining judgment against the estate, placing it in the hands of a receiver. The funds were not sufficient to pay the creditors' claims. Ezekiel brought his action against Thaddeus Harper, and a number of creditors, claiming that in respect of the money due under the will Thaddeus occupied a fiduciary relation towards him (Ezekiel), and that the doctrine of the court with respect to trust funds was applicable in this case, and that he (Ezekiel) was entitled to a charge upon the proceeds of the sale in the hands of the receiver in priority to the claims of Thaddeus' creditors.

The Chief Justice gave judgment against the plaintiff, who brought the present appeal. The case occupied all day yesterday, but the case for the appeal not being furnished, it stands over till August 6th, when it will be continued before the same court. Mr. Bodwell for the appellant, and Messrs. Charles Wilson and W. J. Taylor for the respondents.

Delay is Dangerous.

Mr. Rudolph Hering came over from the Mainland last evening and went out again this morning on the Olympian, it being his intention to return to return to the east via the Northern Pacific. He will stop at Portland for a short time, as he has been making sewerage plans for that place. Speaking of his visit to Victoria, with whose climate and beauty he is charmed, Mr. Hering remarked strongly on the urgency of carrying out a system of sewerage here. He said people often wait until an epidemic breaks out, and then, figuratively speaking, they make a great rush to lock the stable when the horse has gone. He hopes such an experience will not befal Victoria, although delay is risky.

Police Court Matters.

Saturday morning Mr. Johns appeared before the court on a double mission. In the first place he had prefered a charge against a man for stealing from him (Johns) the sum of $10. Johns had been imbibing freely to stimulate his courage to prosecution pitch, and appeared in court in a state of amiable but pronounced demonstrativeness. Then he was charged himself with being drunk. The magistrate sent him home to get sober and retained the other man on the charge of larceny. Yesterday morning Johns was represented by a lawyer, who pleaded guilty for him to the charge of being drunk, and paid over the usual amount. The other charge was not mentioned, and consequently the chief asked for its dismissal on the ground of insufficient evidence.

The remaining two cases were graduates from the Bacchanalian university. They applied to the magistrate who confers the degree conferred in this institution, for the small sum of $5. John Boyd and Peter Hanson may now sign themselves "B. A.'s," Bacchanalian Artists. John Keller, for frequenting a house of questionable character, was convicted and sentenced to one month, with hard labor, in the common jail. He did not appear, though, and the sentence stands recorded against him.

IT MAY YET PROVE GOOD.

Mr. John Bernhardt Still Investigating the Character of the Bear's Nest—It Will be Operated.

For several months past mining men have been expectantly waiting for some news of the result of Mr. John Bernhardt's investigation into the real value of the Bear's Nest mine. Mr. Bernhardt, it will be remembered came here in the interest of the Hamburg capitalists, who hold the majority of stock in the mine. He was supplied with the best experts obtainable, and proposed to go down into the mine and see what it was worth for himself. This he was prevented from doing by those locally interested, and so he was forced to return to San Francisco for legal power to pursue his investigations, he then being firmly convinced that the mine had been scientifically "salted," and he and his companions swindled to the extent of millions Armed with all requisite authority he returned once more to Douglas Island and got Mr. Venator, his chief expert, at work. Thus far Mr. Venator and his companions have only partially explored the mine, but they have found enough promising signs to justify them in advising their principals to continue work. They do not say that the mine is a good one, but they say that it will justify further operations necessary to develop its real character and full extent. In the meantime they continue their researches, while Mr. Bernhardt returns to civilization. He was a passenger down by the Queen yesterday, and was a guest at the Driard last night.

The mining people of Juneau, he says, are decidedly skeptical in regard to the reputed richness of the Bear's Nest. He is still in the dark in regard to it himself, but thinks that the mine, which fell considerably in his estimation a few months ago, is worth prospecting. According to his report, placer mining is all that there is any activity in in Alaska at present, and good money is being made by the primitive process in the neighborhood of Juneau as well as up the Yukon. In the quartz mines, the Treadwell is the only one that is making sure profits Prospecting is still going on in almost every direction, old hands doing the greater part of the work, as but few fresh miners have come in this season.

INCREASED ACCOMMODATION.

The Tramway Company Make Provision For the Housing of Forty Cars.

Another evidence of the progressive spirit of the Tramway Company was given yesterday when two large lots in Pembroke street, near the power house, were purchased by them, for building upon at once. The lots secured are to be the site of a large and complete car house capable of accommodating 40 coaches, as it is thought that fully this number of cars will be required to handle the traffic of Victoria before the city is many years older. Twenty cars will comprise the rolling stock of the company from the opening of the Esquimalt line, and more will be added as it is found that they are needed. The long delayed car that were intended to be in service long ago, are still in Tacoma, the N. P. R. failing to find a steamer capable of bringing them over. Every day's delay means loss to the company, and the railroad company is now threatened with a suit for damages, preliminary steps in which have already been taken.

A BOLD DASH FOR LIBERTY.

Charley, an Indian, Escapes from Prison and Leads Jailer Allen a Lively Chase—Its Result.

The wily red man outwitted the white man on Sunday, but like his forefathers who played games with the "pale-face," he paid dearly for it. Charley, a Nit-Nat Indian, was arrested Saturday night for being drunk, and was lodged in the cell to await his trial on Monday morning. Sunday morning, shortly after 10 o'clock, he asked to be allowed to visit the lavatory, but it was his intention to make this an excuse for obtaining an opportunity to regain his freedom. He rushed out and passed Jailer Allen, who was keeping guard a few feet from the door, and bolted down Cormorant to Government street, with his pursuer close behind him. The chase was brisk and interesting for a time, but the fleet-footed Indian was surely gaining, and Mr. Allen shouted to him several times to stop, or he would fire on him. Charley looked over his shoulder at the revolver, but it was pointed in the air and he paid no heed to the demand to stop. He turned down Government street, and, on reaching Brackman & Ker's establishment, made for the ravine. Then his pursuer saw that his game would escape him and he determined to scare or wing it. He fired a low shot, aiming at Charley's heels, but the running impaired Mr. Allen's aim, and the shot struck the Indian in the thigh. Then he was brought back to the station, but had to be sent to the Jubilee hospital for medical attendance.

Mr. Allen, it may be said, acted with the most conscientious motives, and did not intend to more than scare the fugitive. He is a veteran police officer and one of the most trustworthy as well as popular members of the force. The following statement of the circumstances was submitted by him to Chief Sheppard yesterday:

H. H. W. Sheppard, Esq., Superintendent of Police.

SIR:—In answer to your letter of to-day requesting me to report to you on the circumstances relative to the shooting of the prisoner Charley. I beg to state that about 10.15 a.m. the prisoner Charley asked to be allowed to go to the W. C. I took up a position about ten or twelve feet from the door, with my revolver in my hand. He remained in the closet about five minutes, when all of a sudden he threw open the door, having divested himself of his shoes, hat, coat and vest, and made a dash for the street. I called upon him to stop, threatening to shoot him. He did not stop, but ran down Cormorant street. I followed and shouted, threatening to shoot him if he would not stop. When he reached Government street he made toward Johnson street. Seeing that he was getting a long lead on me, and as there were few people on the street, and no one who showed any signs of assisting me, I thought it my duty to secure the prisoner by some means, consequently I fired a low shot, thinking it would either scare him and that he would surrender, or that I might hit him in the legs and so prevent his escape from me. The shot struck him in the thigh, and I then secured him and took him back to the cell.

I beg to assure you that, whether I was justified or not in acting as I did, I can truthfully say that I was prompted only by an honest desire to do my duty.

A NINE HUNDRED DOLLAR LIMIT.

A Man Imprudently Sleeps in a Room With a Stranger, and Finds It a Very Expensive Matter.

J. A. McNeill returned from up country Saturday, where he had been on business. On reaching town he applied at the Brunswick hotel for lodging, but could not be accommodated there, and he went to the Vancouver house. This place, also, was full, but he got a bed in a room where there was another man, named Leclaire, sleeping. Mr. McNeill had a considerable sum of money in his possession, exceeding $900. In one lot he had a $500, three $100, and two $50 bills. These he took out of his pocket, rolled them up and stowed them away under the belt of his under pants, in which he slept. A loose $10 bill and some silver he left in his pocket. He went to sleep, and early Sunday morning was awakened by someone knocking at the door and asking him if he was not a certain hack driver. He said he was not, and went to sleep again. He was aroused a second time, this for information as to whether he was not some hostler working in a livery stable near by. Mr. McNeill was thoroughly awake now, and prepared to get up. He missed his money, but thinking it might have fallen out of his clothes during the night, he searched the bed for it. No success attended his search, and he reported the loss at the office. Officer Hunter was shortly afterwards on the spot and a further investigation was held. McNeill's bed-fellow, however, had been missing since before McNeill was awakened a second time. A watch was set on the San Francisco boat, while the search was continued in the city.

George Marshall, who works round the Vancouver house, saw Leclaire go off and he set out on his track. Leclaire took a cab and went over the James Bay bridge. Marshall also took a cab and, by a short cut, reached the Outer wharf before Leclaire. Officer Hunter was put on the scent and as soon as Leclaire's carriage came up he was "corralled" and brought back to the city.

When searched, he was found to have $15 in gold and some silver in his pocket, but $25 in bills was found in the lining of his hat. Further search through his clothes revealed nothing more.

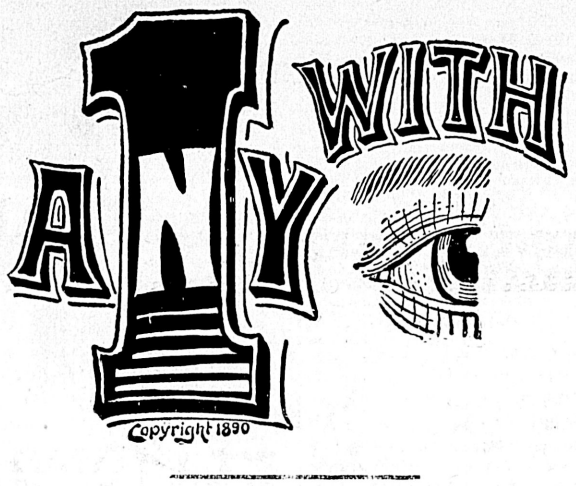

Mr. McNeill had no record by which he could identify any of the bills, with the exception of one, a $50 bill. This was torn across the centre, and was changed at the Louvre saloon by Leclaire.

When brought before the magistrate yesterday morning, Leclaire asked for an adjournment of the case till to-day to enable him to consult a lawyer. The request was granted.

On a Keen Scent.

A gentleman coming down the C. P. R. to Vancouver the other day overheard a conversation between three individuals. One complained that he had only received $800 of the spoil, and threatened to "squeal" if he didn't get more. Thinking this might refer to the Cariboo robbery, the gentleman spoke to Sergt. Langley of the Provincial police who at once started on the trail. He got as far as Angus and traced the men from their to Harrison Hot Springs, and found that in the latter place they had fleeced one of the hotel men out of $60. They were traced all the way back to Vancouver leaving a trail of swindling all along the route. They closed their career on board the Premier where they cheated some of the boat hands. Here they were arrested on some warrant from Tacoma and conveyed back to that place by Captain O'Brien. Having tracked his game to earth Mr. Langley returned to Victoria, satisfied that they were not the Cariboo stage robbers. But had they been, he was dangerously close to their heels.

THE LABOR QUESTION.

sons of toil have as much need of such diversions to prevent the ravages of disease and the premature appearance of decrepitude. The workingman cannot afford the expensive trip, and the luxurious hotel. Is it not all the more essential that his toil should be lightened so that he might have daily recreation? That labor lightened means labor improved. In all skilled labor it is of the utmost importance that the whole day's labor should be equal in quality, that the last stroke of the hammer, the chisel or the mallet, should be as true and as forceful as the first, that there should be no abatement of vigilance while the machine is running, or trembling of the hand while the delicate mechanism is developing, upon which by and by the lives of hundreds may be depending. And yet, what more likely, than in the heat of a summer day there may come such a weariness as tends to the marring not only of a day's work but of some great engine which was meant to be a grand monument of mechanical skill as well as a factor in the progress of our industrial enterprises. In Bellamy's book, "Looking Backward," we read that in the age he pictures the hours of labor will be regulated by the amount of physical and mental tension involved; some tasks requiring great skill having but four hours allotted as sufficient for a day's labor. Doubtless there would be endless practical difficulties in balancing the relative values of the different callings in respect of the mental and physical strain involved, but this much surely might be arrived at, that the maximum hours of labor should not involve the overburdening of any class of laborers. Labor lightened means opportunity for self-culture. Sir Lyon Playfair has well said that "the competition of the world has become a competition of intellect. In the future of the world the greatest industrial nation will be the best educated nation." It was supposed in former times that education was unnecessary for the working people, and that it would lead to their being discontented with their lot. Now, we only long for the time when education will be so universal that an ignorant workman will be unknown among us when master and men shall be equally intelligent, when employers will be able to look at their affairs from a higher standpoint than that of self-interest and the workmen will be too intelligent to follow the demagogues who some time have deceived them and led them astray. It is a little learning that is dangerous, therefore give men more time for reading and study and the solution of the labor question will not be far to seek.

That labor lightened gives opportunities for spiritual growth. "Man does not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God doth man live." This is often forgotten, and men try to live without any communication with heaven; "they hew out for themselves cisterns, broken cisterns that can hold no water, and forsake the fountain of living waters," but as Augustine puts it, God has made us for Himself and the heart of man is restless till it finds rest in Him. The rich may choose this world as their portion; they may say, "soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years, take thine ease, eat, drink and be merry," and the day of retribution may be forgotten, but what shall the sons of toil say who live forgetful of eternal realities. Soul work early and late, drown care with drink, and as for the future let it take care of itself. Soul, who knows if I have got a soul, and who cares what becomes of it? Ah! surely, it is sad indeed to have the toil and hardship and sorrow here and no hope hereafter. Christ came to the toilers of earth with his message of eternal life, and since his church has been established in the world the poor of this world have had the Gospel preached to them and they have proved the strongest support and the most faithful workers in the church. I believe in every church in this city to-day it will be found that the large proportion of the working members of the church are of the wage-earning class, and that in proportion to their means they are by far the most liberal supporters of the church. Then the church has a direct interest in this shortening of the hours of labor that she may reap yet greater spiritual results from the active co-operation of her members, and may have greater opportunity of influencing those who have as yet stood aloof from her ministrations. The Saturday half-holiday has proved a boon of immense value to the church, in that it has enabled families to make such preparation for the Lord's day that its sacred hours have not been disturbed by worldly cares, nor wasted in recovering from the over-fatigue of the week's labor. Would that our stores were closed earlier on Saturday that all employees might share in the pleasures of a well spent Sabbath. The tide of secularism which has swept over this whole Pacific coast must be driven back, the sacredness of the Lord's day must be preserved and this movement for shorter hours will be of very little advantage if it brings about no change in this respect. The excuses for making the Sabbath a day for secular pleasure instead of religious worship would all be removed by shorter hours, and the people, rich and poor, would crowd to the house of God and unite together in giving God thanks and praise to Him who has undone the heavy burdens and let the oppressed go free. What are the prospects with regard to these and other questions, which cause friction between capital and labor? Friends, I believe the dawn is breaking and that such a sight as we are witnessing now in the presence in God's house of so noble a band of wage-earners, is an indication of the way in which the solution of labor troubles will be reached. It is Christianity alone which can undo the heavy burdens, and let the oppressed go free. Christianity will lead to the discovery of a community of interest between employer and employed. All separation between them comes of the devil and furthers the devil's interest. There was a time in the old world when the trades unions or guilds consisted of the masters, the journeymen and apprentices, and these all stood true to each other, and came to exercise vast power and enjoy great prosperity. The apprentice looked forward to being one day a master, and the master remembered he had once been an apprentice, and friction of any serious kind in the guild was impossible. What is the result of the masters and men being separate in two hostile hosts? Why that victory to either party is as disastrous as defeat. Have you thought of the millions labor has lost fighting capital, and of the millions capital has deliberately thrown away to conquer labor? What if these millions had found beneficial channels on the one side or the other, who can estimate the blessings which would have resulted. To say, how can you help it? will not do in the face of the teaching of Jesus Christ, and I for one will not despair to see yet universal, what can be found here and there, that masters and men are one in heart and one in interest, doing each to the other what they would have the other do to them. Christianity will lead to mutual charity. Listen to the master and he will tell you the leaders of the men are arrant scoundrels, and he is doubtless sincere in his belief; and listen to the men and you will hear language that is insufferable applied to the masters, and the impartial man who ventures a word in favor of either side is sure to be denounced by the other; either he is supposed to be a poor creature who toadies to the rich, or a dangerous radical whose mouth should be stopped. I believe in both masters and men, and I sympathize with both in the day of strife, but I refuse to doubt the possibility of their yet shaking hands over their differences and discovering that neither party had the monopoly of the right side of the dispute. Christianity will lead to mutual concessions. Why should the capitalist be determined on the utter subjection of the workman or the workman insist on capital swallowing views or suffering his vengeance? Put yourself in the place of each other. Let the laborer think what might be his view if he was a master, and let the master remember that perhaps he was once a servant, and depend upon it there will soon be an opportunity for the peacemaker. But you see these three requirements are the outcome of Christian character and Christian principle, so that what we need is that the Lord himself should appear among us and that He should make His gospel of peace and goodwill towards men, to take possession of our hearts. And how can men whose leaders are without character or principle expect to secure a victory? Friends, let us remember that this is Christ's religion to undo heavy burdens and to let the oppressed go free, and that we break every yoke.

MAMMA'S BABY BOY.

How He Entertained the Passengers on a Railway Train.

She was one of the most aggressive women these broad United States ever produced, says the New York Tribune. She bounced on board a Pennsylvania railroad south-bound train at Newark, and took the car by storm. When she had planted an unpromising infant in a vacant seat, and arranged a wilderness of bundles with appropriate remarks, which might have been heard by the engineer across the tender and four coaches, she seated herself by the child and began a continuous and distracting comment about papa and grandma and auntie, which made all the passengers shiver and crane their necks to see where the conversational blizzard came from.

"Think you'll know grandma, Charlie?" she vivaciously inquired.

"Yep."

"And dear Aunt Fanny?"

"Guess so. Ma, will Aunt Fanny need shaving as much as she did last summer?"

"You mustn't say that, Charlie. Won't you have a nice time playing with little Willie Corrigan, next door?"

"You bet I will! Ma, has Willie got that dorg we used to fool with?"

"I expect he has, dear; and Willie is such a manly little fellow I like to have mamma's good little boy with him."

"Ma."

"Yes, darling."

"Gimme a cake—one of them big fly-cakes, ma."

And when that car reached the Broad Street station there wasn't a man among its cargo of frantic humanity whose fingers had not twitched from Newark to Philadelphia with the longing to hurl ma and Charlie through the nearest window, bag, bundles, fly-cakes and all.

China's Empress Dowager.

The power of one of the greatest political figures of the day, perhaps of all time, is said to be on the wane. The Empress Dowager of China has been shorn of her prestige by the rebellious independence of the young Emperor. He refused to see the bride which she forced upon him and has been issuing vigorous decrees on his own account. He has been censuring the old Ministers right and left, particularly Chang Chi Tung.

WAYS OF FAIR WOMEN.

GOSSIP ABOUT THEIR DOINGS THAT WILL INTEREST BOTH SEXES.

Most Englishwomen Have Large Feet with Low Insteps—Women's Singular Ideas About Money—Costumes in Red and Black that Dazzle the Eye.

Every American woman who sojourns in London raises her voice against the large and ill-fitting shoes which she finds here. The natives seek to justify the monstrosities on the plea that the feet should be clad loosely and stoutly. The truth, however, is that Englishwomen have big feet—abnormally big feet. Moreover, marvellously low insteps seem to be a characteristic of the typical English foot. The Englishwomen are exceedingly sensitive upon the subject of their prodigious pedals, and they make it a point to talk of the propriety of wearing large boots and shoes in order to avert corns and other similar discomforts; yet I am told by dealers in footwear that corns and bunions are quite as prevalent here as elsewhere. Yet there have been English ladies with wonderfully small feet. One of the famous beauties of the Court of George IV. wore a shoe only five inches in length, yet she was above medium height and was otherwise symmetrically proportioned.—London Letter to Chicago News.

Mrs. Squire's Fast Horse.

To see the woman devotee of the trotter in all her glory one must go to the country. At all the resorts during the season the denaure city girl, who has been a victim to style for the rest of the year and has sat discontentedly in the back of her brougham while Jehu handled the ribbons, lets herself loose and drives the fast horse at will on country roads over hill and through valley. The country is the trotting-horse's paradise all the year round, and country fairs are largely patronized by women who love the speeders. Mrs. Rollin M. Squire is a type of a great many estimable women who delight in a fast horse. The poet ex-Commissioner has a country place in Westchester, and Mrs. Squire delights to drive a superb Kentucky thoroughbred, for which her husband paid $5,000. She appears at fairs in a dainty country phaeton behind this fine horse, and is so proud of him that she does not miss an opportunity to enter him for the honorary prize for fine blood horses often offered at the larger county fairs. Mrs. Squire has driven her horse herself in such contests, exhibiting his paces and accomplishments. —Correspondence of the Richmond Dispatch.

Her Grace of Marlborough.

Yesterday afternoon I encountered the Duchess on a tour of a picture gallery. She is not an especially pretty woman in spite of the adultation of the tribe of Jenkins. She represents a very usual type of the well-bred society women, with brown hair, the standard blue-gray American eyes, regular features and somewhat ennuied expression. She is rather above middle height and weighs from 15 to 20 pounds less than she did when she was plain Mrs. Hammersley. This, however, is an improvement, rather than otherwise. She wore a tailor gown of chocolate brown with brown straw capote trimmed with one rather large yellowish-brown orchid. She chatted with her two companions with considerable animation, and her voice was cultivated and musical. She is making herself very pleasant in New York, but there is a look about her mouth and her eyes which would not impress me as belonging of right to a woman who was especially happy in her day and generation.—N. Y. L. Savannah News.

The Woman in Scarlet.

There seems to be a craze for red this Spring, and this lurid hue is observable in many branches of my lady's toilet. Red coats and jackets of box-cloth are very fashionable for walking or driving, red cloaks are worn over evening gowns to ball or opera. I saw a girl on Twenty-third street the other morning in a gray gown with bright red gloves. The most bizarre use to which it is put is in stationery, the extreme being a heavy paper of bright scarlet, upon which the writer's name is engraved in a black fac-simile of her hand writing. Black and red have always been held to be the particular colors of Old Nick, but the dear girls are determined he shall not have the exclusive right to them any longer. I saw a blonde at a reception one evening in bright scarlet tulle, scarlet hat and satin shoes. The effect was startling. I think one will see in New York more audacious and bizarre combinations and effects in dress than in any other city on the globe, and yet we are always hearing of the well-dressed New York woman.—Chicago Herald's N. Y. Letter.

The New Orleans Girl.

There seems to be a prevailing heresy in some quarters that Southern women do not possess the culture and learning which are supposed to mark the advancement of the sex elsewhere; it is true that their standard did not originate in the rarified air of Concord, nor are their tastes in sympathy with those whose Mecca is Boston, but that of itself does not imply a defect, only a difference. In the first place spinsterhood as a vocation is not popular in the South, and while from numerical reasons alone single blessedness or an early grave must be the lot of some women, still they do not count on that in their education, and hence their talents and time are given to subjects which are most valued from a social and domestic point of view. As a rule the women in the best circles all speak French, not the average boarding-school French, but the French of the Frenchman, with the accent of France, if not always of Paris. They are accomplished musicians and clever artists. Girls are taught to write interesting, spirited letters; to become good and often brilliant conversationalists. They try to keep up with the standard literature, both English and French, and as politics come natural to a Southern gentleman, he generally calls it statesmanship, it follows that cultured women are interested and well up in political issues. In addition to all that they are generally good housekeepers. If they are also fond of novels, of bonbons, of dress, of society, who can prove that they have sacrificed higher duties to these diversions?—St. Louis Post-Despatch.

Alas, Poor Yorick! I Knew Him.

YE MERRIE OLDEN TIME.

When the Village Doctor Pulled Teeth with a Key.

Did you ever sit down in a dentist's chair, reader, with the naked forceps glittering above your head, and all your faculties and senses abnormally alert? Did you ever sit down thus and open your mouth and point to one of those old double-crowned cuspids that, like icebergs, submerge three-fourths of their bulk out of sight and are more deeply rooted in the constitution of man than original sin? Did you ever, we say, sit down thus, in the days before anaesthetics had mitigated the barbarities of dentistry, and say to that man, who is literally a man of steel: "This is the tooth. Take a good grip and haul away"?

If you have you will know how your grandfather used to feel when he went to the village doctor to have a bad tooth extirpated.

The stalwart son of Æsculapius was wont to lean back upon the forceps, and tug, and jerk, and saw like a man trying to rein in a runaway horse. Your grandfather grasped the arms of the chair in which he was imprisoned, and squeezed them until his joints cracked in order to keep from yelling. But the agony kept getting worse and worse. The victim was sure he was going to die—when, all of a sudden the top of his head came off with a roar, the planetary systems rushed together in one vast cosmic salad, and lifting his bewildered eyes for a moment to the disembodied source of his misery, the patient leaned over and discharged a pint of blood into the dentist's basin.

THE LONGEST THROW WITH A LARIAT.

Buffalo Bill's Man Claims 116 Feet and a Montana Man Claims 94 Feet.

In the matter of authentic records for roping with the lariat, none probably exist. One hundred and sixteen feet has been claimed for a California man now travelling with Buffalo Bill's show, while 94 feet has been published for a Billings, (Mont.) man, but both of these records are preposterous. The average cow-puncher from Texas to Montana uses a rope which rarely reaches 50 feet, and from 12 to 20 feet must be deducted from this measure for circumference of noose. Sometimes a so-called "California loop" exceeds this by nearly 5 feet.

In catching a wild horse or steer, after the noose is over the animal's neck or legs the end of the rope is swiftly tied around the horn of the saddle, the horse being braced back to resist the shock, which in most cases either snaps the rope or sends the captured animal all in a heap. What the possibilities of roping to catch are is hard to say. No doubt, with a horse at full gallop down the hill, the wind favorable and a good long rope, an expert may reach 100 feet, but such cases are few and far between, and most good ropers feel extremely pleased when they can reach out the full length of their 45-foot rope and catch.—Spirit of the Times.

THE SALARIES OF SINGERS.

The Prices Paid for Contraltos and Altos in Philadelphia and Boston.

A woman with a good contralto voice will begin at an annual salary of $200, which, if she is successful, may rise to an average of $300. There are two churches in Philadelphia, I believe, which pay their contraltos $400; but this, in cities outside of Boston, which average about $200 higher, is unusual. And even a genuine alto—that rarest of things in these days—will command but from $300 to $400 per annum. The Hub, of course, does better than this, by adding $200; but even with this addition, none of these salaries appear precisely extravagant, or to admit of much luxury in living, and salaries are rarely increased.

Should a rival church make an offer for a voice, if the first church is desirous of retaining it, the rival's price is overbid and the voice retained. But this is the only reason of which I have any knowledge for increasing salaries.

Boston Baked Beans.

Select the small, white, dry beans. Take one pint of them and soak over night. In the morning drain them off, add fresh water, and let it come to a boil. Then drain them out and put into the pot for baking. This, too, should be deep in shape. Mix in a cup a teaspoonful of yellow mustard, half as much baking soda, and two or three tablespoonfuls molasses. Stir this well into the beans. Have one-third pound nice salt pork—the sort with "a streak of lean and a streak of fat"—score the rind across both ways with a sharp knife and press this down on top of the rest. Add water to cover and bake four hours. From time to time add sufficient water to keep moist and soft. The beans should not break up and should be of an enticing brown color.—[Housekeeper's Weekly.

LOCAL.

Steamer Walla Walla, which arrived on Sunday morning from San Francisco, brought ten passengers and 179 tons of freight for this port.

Steamer Umatilla sailed for San Francisco yesterday morning, her passenger list being as follows: Miss Lewis, George Merritt, W. D. Anderson, Miss Paterson, Mrs. W. Cumming, H. A. Ware, Rev. A. VanNevel, Thomas Deasy, Rev. E. Sobery, T. C. Hulbert and B. C. Mitchell.

Steamer Barbara Boscowitz, fully loaded, left for all northern ports on Saturday night.

Steamer Dunsmuir is receiving alterations and improvements which will take three weeks to complete, at the hands of the Albion Iron Works Co.

Steamer Princess Louise, Captain John Irving commanding, departed last night for Fort Simpson with a full freight and the following passengers: Mrs. and Miss Hunter, T. Carpmall and son, Mrs. and Miss Hall, W. T. Livock, A. W. Vowell, Wm. Harvey, J. and Mrs. Mahrer, and J. Moore and wife. In addition to the usual cargo, the Louise carried up a wrecking crew with their apparatus to commence work on the Sardonyx. The diver's rig included in the appliances in question was an absolutely new one just imported from London.

Steam schooner Mischief is discharging her valuable sealskin cargo at C. Rattray & Co.'s (Janion's) wharf.

Steamer Rainbow arrived from Bute Inlet on Sunday with little freight and no news.

Steamer George W. Elder is expected to leave Esquimalt dock on Wednesday (to-morrow.)

The steamship Batavia, from Vancouver for Japan, passed down yesterday. Her passengers are: Mr. Samuel L. Gracey, Mrs. Samuel L. Gracey and family, Mr. Brocklehurst, Mr. A. J. Little, Mrs. A. J. Little, Mrs. A'Hok, Mrs. Diong Choi, Bishop Wilson, Mr. Dunthrope, Rev. H. S. Dyke, Mr. G. H. Seedmore, Captain Walker, Miss McGregor, Miss Meade, Mr. D. S. Bisbee, Mr. Woolf, Mr. E. G. Gaunllett, Mr. Anderson. Rev. Mr. Dyke is a professor of theology in Harvard University and goes to the Orient on a holiday trip. The Batavia takes a full cargo of general merchandise, consisting largely of flour and cotton.

Br. sh. Celeste Burrill, Haynes, master, 1,761 33L11, is 24 days out from Hiogo for Victoria.

Am. sh. State of Maine, Nickles, master, 1,465, 33L11, has left Hongkong for this port.

Am. sh. Lucilie, Sherman, master, 1,329 33L11, has left Saigon for Royal Roads.

Steamer Queen, Captain Carroll, with several large excursion parties composed of prominent Americans, arrived at Nanaimo from Alaska yesterday and at the outer wharf here early this morning. She will leave at 10 o'clock for the Sound. Many of the passengers came down by train yesterday and spent last night at the Driard, which was taxed to its full capacity to accommodate the visitors. The officers of the Queen on this trip, as on the last, vacated their own quarters to make room for the tourists.

Ill-fortune seems to be following in the wake of the unfortunate bark Sarona. Juan Villacane, one of her Chilian crew, met with a fatal accident on Friday. He was aloft on the royal yard taking down sail, when he missed his footing and fell to the deck. He struck upon his feet, but fell against some anchor chains lying close by. His skull was fractured and he died within an hour. He was interred in the cemetery at Dungeness, all those of his late comrades and the people residing in the vicinity, taking part in the funeral ceremonies.

The unknown barkentine reported at anchor off the Cape, is thought to have been one outward bound craft which took refuge from the wind. She is believed to be safe.

The steamer Idaho, of Washington, is ashore at South Point, near Port Townsend, and will prove a total loss. Friday night the sea was making a clean break over the ship. Grave fears are entertained for the safety of the crew, who are still on board, unless they left on a wrecking schooner last night. The surf is so high that it is impossible to see the wreck. There is no life or surfboat in the vicinity.

The strike of seamen on the steamship Eastern Oregon, plying on the Sound, is reported to be owing to the abuse and insulting language the men were subjected to by first officer Leech, formerly of this city, and who held positions on several of the C. P. N. Co's steamers.

BRITISH COLUMBIA BREWING CO.,

VICTORIA, B. C.
Capital, $150,000 in 15,000 Shares at $10 each

PROVISIONAL BOARD OF TRUSTEES—T. W. Carter, John Irving, J. C. Bales, Geo. A. Perrin, and John A. Andrew.
BANKERS—Bank of British North America.
SOLICITORS—Walker, Pemberton & Dumbleton, 18 Chancery Lane.
SECRETARY (pro tem.)—J. C. Bales.

This Company is formed for the purpose of acquiring and extending the well-known and old established business of "The Vancouver Ale, Porter and Steam Beer Brewery," in the City of Victoria.

The promoters confidently expect, by the aid of capital and influence, to largely extend the business and introduce the production of Lager Beer, for which there is a large and growing demand throughout the Province. They will also shortly commence distilling.

The quantity of Lager Beer passed through the Custom House, Victoria, B. C., for the six months ended December 21st, 1880, was as follows, i. e., 13,430 gallons in bottles, 12,705 gallons in casks.

The quantity of spirits passed through the Inland Revenue Office for the year ended 30th June last was 66,019.93 proof gallons, and probably an addition of 50 per cent. may be made to this for lots entered duty paid.

Shares are offered to the public for subscription by a deposit of 50 per cent. per share on allotment, and the balance by assessments as required; no one assessment to exceed 10 per cent. of the subscribed capital.

Forms of application may be had of the promoters or secretary. jly25-tf
